CITY OF PETROGRAD IS GUARDED BY ISLAND

Which is the Most Strongly Fortified Place in the Northern Empire.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—"Kronstadt, the island that guards the imperial city of Russia, Petrograd, is the most strongly fortified place in the northern empire," begins a statement on war geography just given out by the National Geographic Society.

"The fortifications on the island were begun by Peter the Great in 1703, after the dispossession of the Swedes. They have been added to and strengthened by many first-rank engineers in every reign since then, until today they form a formidable obstacle to any fleet that rides the seas. Kronstadt is the port and outpost defense of the Russian capital, the seat of the Russian admiralty, and the first naval station of the Tsar. The port city is situated on the island of Kotlin, though it is generally written of under the name of its well known port city.

"Powerful Forts. 'The older, three-decker' forts of Kronstadt, five in number, repulsed the Anglo-French fleet during the Crimean war. These redoubts today, although mounting modern ordnance are largely obsolete, but powerful forts and sunken batteries have been installed to keep pace with the development of the naval strength of neighboring states. The defensive works of the island and adjacent shores have been carried out on an extensive plan, much of it being done according to the specifications of Todeben, modified and brought up to date by succeeding engineers. Fort Constantine and four batteries were constructed by Todeben to defend the principal, or southern approach, while seven batteries were placed to guard the shallower northern channel. The modern works are low, powerfully armored and reinforced, and mounting heavy Krupp guns in turrets. Earthworks link up the chains of redoubts. 'The island on which Kronstadt stands, lying nearly in mid channel at the head of the Gulf of Finland is the front door of Russia. It is so situated as to make the bombardment of the capital impossible before the passage of its forts and batteries. The island is twenty-one miles west of Petrograd, and stretches for eight miles, east and west, in the midst of the pocket-like gulf. Its guns are within easy range of the shores to the north and south, thus enjoying perfect command of the channels between, and their effectiveness extends well into the country beyond the water. It is fortified by parallel lines on the northwest, southwest and southeast. The southern line of defenses is the strongest. Altogether, the island leaves little in the way of military supremacy to Heligoland and Gibraltar.

Port City There. 'Formerly most of the imports into Russia by way of Petrograd were landed at Kronstadt, and thence taken to the capital by lighters and by land. Canalization, however, has made it possible for larger freighters to reach the Petrograd docks, and this has somewhat cut down the importance of Kronstadt as a commercial harbor.

The port city is situated at the eastern base of the island, well sheltered from hostile attack, and it commands three harbors. The commercial harbor has wharfage and anchorage for 1,000 ships. The central harbor is equipped for the building and repairing of merchant vessels, while the remaining harbor is devoted to naval usage. It is equipped with excellent machine shops, dry docks, and other facilities peculiar to the modern navy yard. This harbor offers a secure anchorage to the Russian war vessels, behind the island and protected by the weight of powerful fortifications."
